TRUE STORY OF THE STAMP TRADE'S BIGGEST PROBLEM

The solution wasn't obvious, but with your help (Collectors) – would it work?

Managing Director Andrew McGavin of Universal Philatelic Auctions explains:

Twenty years ago, and I suspect the same is true today, the typical stamp dealer's biggest problem was not what sold, but what would not sell. In those days mail-bid postal auctions would parcel up their unsold lots (unsolds) and sell them on to other auctions which hopefully had different collectors in their database to whom such material would be new.

In this way they would "release" funds in order to be able to purchase new stamp collections. Other auctions not participating in this exercise would spend a significant proportion of their describing time in re-describing "unsolds" in order to re-present them as "new."

The significance of re-cycling/re-presenting material should not be underestimated – too high a proportion of unsold material stymied dealers from purchasing new stock – a problem many collectors may recognize today when re-visiting suppliers who never seem to have something new to offer: ultimately collectors stop going back to dealers who offer only stale stock.

In essence a dealer selling the best stamps out of any collection he or she has purchased may cover costs, but the profit in any typical collection lies in slower moving stock which is more difficult and takes longer to sell.

Try as they might, there didn't seem to be a satisfactory solution, although today many dealers use eBay to clear unsold stock even at a loss.

Universal Philatelic Auctions (UPA) puzzled long over the problem, seeking to turn a "negative" into a "positive." The breakthrough came when its Director took the view that if it was not selling it must be too expensive. This soon led to the conclusion "why don't we reduce the estimate (and reserve) until sold or given away" – after all – everything must be worth something, and if not it should be given away to make way for new stock ... and so ... twelve years ago ...

The Universal Unique Reducing Estimate lot system was born

In 1999 a 6,500-lot UPA auction was created. The director agonized – "would it work?" No dealer or auction, to his knowledge, had ever done this before. Would collectors hold off from bidding and wait until the next auction when the estimate was lower? – or, worse still, the following auction – when the estimate was reduced even lower? Would collectors pass up the first opportunity at new stock and wait – and, if so, for how long?

It was a tense few months, but in the end the director need not have worried. There were 650 different collectors who bid in that first auction, spending £65,000 (US $100,000+). Collectors who saw something they really wanted would bid first time. But, what of the unsold stock – did it sell? Universal had done something never seen in stamps before, or since – it actually told collectors in subsequent auctions how many times a lot had been unsold – so that collectors could work out how much it had been reduced by from the original estimate ...

... and did the unsolds sell? Collectors bid on the unsolds in following auctions – so that sometimes an unsold lot reoffered actually sold for more than available before.

And now, some 12 years later, we come to today. UPA runs quarterly auctions with approximately 17,000 lots in each auction and over £700,000 (US $1,000,000+) of stamps from all over the world offered – including Thematics, British, US, and most countries of the world. Today UPA holds the United Kingdom record for the most stamp collectors bidding in a single auction – 1,491 different collectors – collectors who live in all corners of the world ... and yet, surprisingly, 9 out of 10 bidders are successful due to the auctions' significant 17,000+ lots size. Could you be one of them?

JACK'S JOURNAL

What do I get out of it?

I'm about to date myself! In the Broadway musical, Man of La Mancha, Aldonza asks Sancho, "Why do you follow him? [Don Quixote] ... What do you get out of it?"

Dare I ask: What do you get out of the ATA?

Yes, there are membership benefits, including this magazine, 1,200 checklists, selling via TopicalsOnLine (TOL) and more. But think of what you can do without ATA membership: buy handbooks, DVDs, archived articles, even the Topical Time archive – all 64 years worth. You can buy on TOL, visit our website and see thematic exhibits, join as many ATA study units as you like and attend our annual National Topical Stamp Show – all without belonging.

So why remain a member? You've purchased your checklists. And, after all, Topical Time doesn't often include anything on your topic. (At least that's the reason some members tell us why they are not renewing.)

Let's go back to La Mancha.

Aldonza: "Why do you follow him? ... What do you get out of it?"

Sancho: "What do I get? Plenty! Why, already I've gotten..."

Aldonza: "You've gotten nothing! So why do you do it?"

Sancho (singing): "I like him. I really like him."

"So why do you do it?" Why do you remain a member of the ATA? Because you like – you really like – topical collecting! You want to receive updates of those checklists – or maybe a unique customized one on a new topic. You want to be exposed to other topics and get ideas from Topical Time. You want to keep up with the topical philatelic scene. You want to be part of something much larger than yourself – the largest thematic group in the world.

“So why do you do it?” There are also important reasons beyond yourself. You want to help the ATA promote topical collecting as a wonderful branch of philately. You want to invest in the future of the ATA, so it will be around to enrich topicalists in future generations. You want to demonstrate your gratitude for all the enjoyment that topical collecting has given you over the years. Because you belong, you accomplish all this.

“What do I get out of the ATA?” This is a valid question. But there is also another question to ask. A nobler one: “What meaning does my membership have – beyond myself?”

I hope you will take the higher road and ask – and answer – that question when it's time to renew your membership.

Editing With Style
Wayne L. Youngblood

The Editor's Job...

If you are an editor of a newsletter or journal of any size, your job is to not only make the material you receive fit, but make it readable as well. Chances are very good that no contributor to your publication is exempt from necessary edits to achieve this goal. Indeed, some need more work than others.

Remember, none of us is an objective judge of our own writing. The best writing occurs when an author writes, edits, rewrites, re-edits and fine tunes his or her thoughts, then submits the work to an editor for a final polish.

As an editor, your primary responsibilities include (but are not limited to):

1. Correct obvious problems in language and grammar.
2. Help the prose read more smoothly, by reworking awkward constructions and rewriting as necessary, without changing the author's intent.
3. Ensure prose conforms to the chosen style of your publication and that its approach is consistent with other pieces in the same journal.
4. Help the author make his or her points more effectively.

In this way, you ensure that everything printed in your publication maintains a coherent style and presents authors' thoughts in a single editorial "voice" that does not distract the reader. ☐

Boldly to the Future!

The American Topical Association promotes topical stamp collecting in many ways and is constantly seeking new opportunities to be a resource to our members. We are continually encouraged by messages from our members:

"The Topical Time archive is an absolutely fantastic resource. I even tried the search functions. Great job to all." – John Macco

Steve Herling found out about the ATA and inquired about motorcycles on stamps. Vera Felts responded, "We do have a checklist on motorcycles that lists 730 items. ATA can also help you connect with other motorcycle stamp enthusiasts." Steve wrote:

"Thanks for the awesome and positive response.

You've made my day as now I won't be re-inventing the wheel. I will be joining the ATA on this pending Friday. I am indeed VERY interested in obtaining a list of motorcycle topic enthusiasts and sharing my information. Again – thank you very much. Awesome!"

BTW, Steve was able to find a number of the motorcycle stamps he needed on www.TopicalsonLine.com, ATA's popular online sales site.

Our continued growth in providing such resources is made possible in great part by contributions by members like you to our Boldly To The Future campaign. Your donations add up! Thank you!

VERA'S VIEWS

A few things...

Membership Directory. A big “thanks” goes out to the hundreds of members who have already submitted Membership Directory permissions to the ATA Office. We are on track to have the Directory produced by July, and it will certainly be available at NTSS in Portland. If you have not given us your permission, then only your name may be included. By the time you are reading this, it may or may not be too late to give us your information — but why not go to our website or email or mail us today in case you can still be included? All of your fellow members thank you for participating!!

Staying in Touch. By email: Staying connected is an important part of ATA's service to you. A very important component of that connectivity is being sure we always have your correct email address. I've been amazed at how many of us change our email provider from time to time! It will be so helpful to ATA if you remember to let us know when you change your email address. A one-line email from either your old or new email address is all that is needed. Many members notified us of their email address for the very first time when giving permissions for our upcoming Membership Directory. We are most appreciative of having this way to stay connected with you. We never release your email address or any other information without your permission, and we do not fill your email box with “junque” or dozens of emails. During most years, you can expect to receive six Because You Belong emails and perhaps a BTTF request, plus a dues reminder if your membership expires during that year. If you have an email address and have not supplied it to ATA, we hope you will share it so we can stay more connected with you.

By mail: The United States Postal Service now has a great service whereby ATA is notified when you change your address. Even if you forget to let us know of your move, the USPS will kindly do so. We no longer have to pay postage due on returned copies of Topical Time, or extra postage to mail them on to you; the copies are automatically sent by the postal service from our printer to your new address. This is a new, efficient service offered by our postal people and it saves ATA money and speeds your issues to you. The ATA Office is notified “after the fact” that your Topical Time was mailed to your new mailing address. We then contact you by email or by mail to assure ourselves that you should be receiving your issue at the address supplied to us by the USPS. This service is part of the NCOA (National Change Of Address) database maintained by the USPS and subscribed to by our publisher. I just thought you'd like to know of this excellent program – the “service” part of USPS is very strong in this instance.

ATA Society Tables. Throughout the year, you'll find ATA out and about at close to 30 stamp shows around the United States and Canada. To give you an idea of how we publicize ATA at shows and events, let me tell you about the month of March – an average month of promoting ATA. Our literature appeared on a “freebie table” at three shows where we did not have a society table: Springpex in Springfield, Va. (courtesy of Gerry Frazier); Nashville Stamp Show in Tenn. (Janice Erbach and Clay Morgan); and Garfield-Perry in the Cleveland area (Roger Rhoads). We were also represented at the Westfield Stamp Show in New Jersey, conducted by our affiliate chapter, Westfield Stamp Club, and members Allan Fisk and Fred Skvara, where one new member joined ATA.

Also in March, ATA Ambassadors discovered at KnoxPEx in Knoxville, Tenn., that topical collecting is alive and well in that beautiful area. Four more members joined ATA and dozens of checklists were printed for ATA members attending the show. A presentation was given on “Topicals in the State Symbols of Tennessee” which was well attended. Enthusiasm for topical collecting was infectious – and probably as strong as I’ve seen it at a show in the Midwest/Eastern United States. Tom Broadhead and Jim Pettway of our affiliated chapter, Knoxville Philatelic Society, paved the way for our presence there and were wonderful hosts.

ATA ended the month at the St. Louis Stamp Expo, and we welcomed eight more new members into our ranks during that show. Our presence at NTSS in St. Louis last June helped pave the way for a nice presence at this year’s Expo. A new ATA offering at shows is a packet of beginner album pages designed by member Aimée Devine and packaged by volunteer member Andrea Smith with a glassine of topical stamps donated by members Joanne Patterson, Norm Jacobs, Colin Manuele, Chris Loffredo, Henrik Rossell and others. Many adult beginners and a few grandparents looking for a way to introduce their progeny to collecting were happy to find this new offering by ATA. Also during St. Louis Stamp Expo, new member Dan Malan gave a topical presentation on “Doreana”; if you’d like to know what that topic entails, check out his exhibit at this year’s NTSS. Sue Bruce was a full-time Ambassador at the Expo and enthusiastically helped set up and take down the ATA society table each day in addition to sharing topical collecting with dozens of folks. An ATA Roundtable meeting was conducted on Sunday afternoon of the Expo. Members of two ATA-affiliated chapters, Greater Mound City Stamp Club and Webster Groves Stamp Club, as well as Topical Time editor Wayne Youngblood, also boosted ATA's presence at the show.

I share this information not to highlight the individuals and affiliated chapters involved in spreading the word about ATA in a typical month of the year, but to demonstrate that there are many different kinds of ways to participate in shows and events. Put your creativity to work and let ATA know how we can help you in promoting topical collection in your own way at your local event or show. And do let us know the results!

These activities at stamp shows on the part of ATA contribute to our membership growth and our strong standing within our hobby. When you attend a stamp show and see an ATA society table, be sure to stop to thank your ATA Ambassadors for being there. While there, ask them if you can spend an hour or two with them, talking to stamp show attendees about our hobby. Or, better yet, take your turn at the table so the Ambassador who spent time and effort setting up the table can take some time off to enjoy the exhibits or the bourse! ATA now has more than 60 Ambassadors who have volunteered time at stamp shows or events. If you'd like to know more about how you, too, can enjoy this aspect of our hobby, just contact the ATA Office.

Information Specialty Board. One of the very special features of ATA's Membership Directory is the Information Specialty Board listings. ATA is all about connecting our members in any way possible, and this listing has been helpful to so many members through the years. When member Donald Smith of Canada (since deceased) called the ATA Office for help in identifying dog breeds on a few of his stamps, he was referred to a dogs-on-stamps specialist from Israel, ATA life member Arie Schwarz, who helped him identify all the breeds in question. Being a member of the Board is free and requires only a modicum of time. But it can pay big dividends by connecting you with others who share your passion. Even if you don't consider yourself an "expert" in your topical area, if you're willing to share some knowledge about your stamps with others, please email, call or write the ATA Office by the end of June to volunteer for the Information Specialty Board.

WAYNE'S IMPRESSIONS

A Fowl Idea or pre-hatched concept?

Let's see if we can answer the age-old question: "Which came first, the chicken or the stamp?" All yolking aside, it has long been accepted that one of the more controversial – and silly looking – of all United States stamps is the 3¢ Poultry Industry stamp of 1948. That stamp, one of the large brood of stamps released during the so-called boat at Jamestown in 1607 (actually, well before that, if you want to count those that came along for the ride with Columbus or evidence that suggests that Polynesians brought them to South America as early as the 1300s). The organized buying and selling of poultry dates back well into the colonial days, and there are references to a poultry industry as early as 1829.

"flood of '48" (referring to the large number of politically motivated issues released during that major election year), features a large hen, with the denomination tablet consisting of an egg. The stamp, Scott 968, is shown in Figure 1.

So why 1948? In reality, 1948 just happened to be the 100th anniversary the Boston Poultry Show (the first one was held in 1849). A mere coincidence?

However, most collectors don't know that 1948 was not the first time the idea of a chicken stamp reared its ugly head. If Roy M. Lynnes – backed by the entire U.S. poultry industry – had had his way, we would have been treated to a series of four stamps (with denominations of 1¢, 2¢, 3¢ and 5¢) to be released in time for the 1939 World's Fair. Lynnes was editor of the Poultry Supply Dealer, and had submitted a full 20-page proposal for the series to the U.S. Post Office Department for the Seventh World's Poultry Congress and Exhibition, which was to be held July 28-Aug. 7, 1938, in Cleveland, Ohio. A member's auto windshield decal for that show is pictured in Figure 2, and the proposed designs of the failed stamps are shown in Figure 3. The stamp essays were featured in the June 18, 1938, issue of Stamps Magazine.

The designs (or what you can see of them) are rather interesting and do represent the poultry industry of the day. All four stamps share the uniting design elements of frames similar to the low values of the 1937 Army-Navy series, with postage and denomination tablets at top and bottom, and the inscriptions "Seventh World's Poultry Congress" at top and "July 28th - Aug. 7th, 1939" at bottom.

The central design of the 1¢ stamp shows men unloading crates of chicks from a mail car, and an inset of a single baby chick. This, perhaps, was to symbolize the basis of the poultry industry. At that time about 800 million chicks were hatched each year, of which more than two thirds were mailed!

The design of the 2¢ stamp features a woman feeding grown chickens on the farm, in a henhouse. Slightly more unusual is the 3¢ stamp design, titled "Early American," which features an American Indian working his way through the woods with a turkey carcass slung over his shoulder.

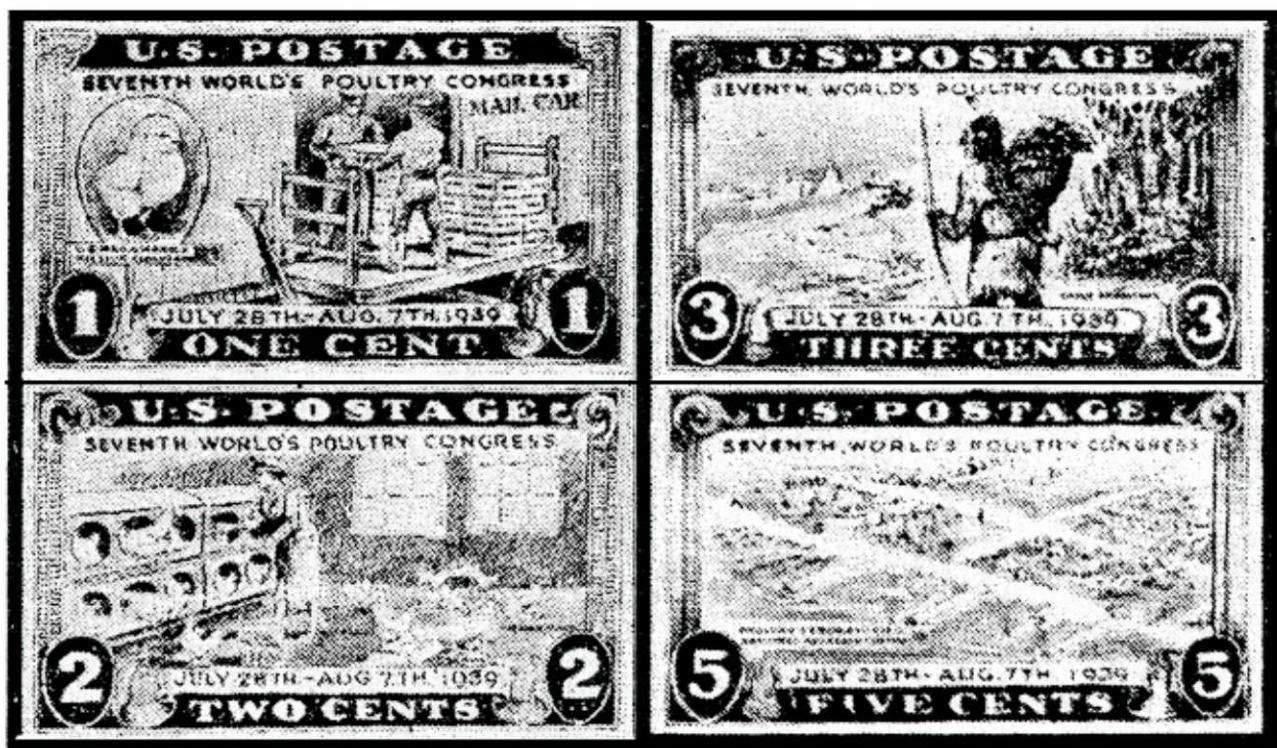

Figure 3. Few collectors are aware that there was a proposal for not one – but a series of four – poultry stamps that were intended to be released in 1939. The proposal ultimately failed, but left these designs behind.

The 5¢ stamp (an airmail rate for a bird that can't fly) shows an aerial view of the poultry laboratories at the National Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville, Md., representing the involvement of the federal government in the poultry industry.

Oddly, Lynnes and his committee (also all stamp collectors) made a good argument for the validity of a 1939 Chicken series. At that time the poultry industry accounted for more than $1 billion per year, exceeded only by corn and dairy products. The expected attendance at the 1939 convention was more than 500,000. But it's unclear whether collectors would have actually wanted to shell out for the stamps.

Although we don't have any way of knowing eggs-actly how seriously Lynnes' proposal was taken in Washington, we do know the series was ultimately rejected, and that another decade would pass before there was finally a poultry stamp available for use – or collector ridicule.

Today, the proposal and all the follow up would be handled by the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee, a diverse group that serves (in theory) at the pleasure of the postmaster general. CSAC, as it is referred to, exists not only to sort out the good from the bad and the ugly, but to keep our stamp program free of undue political pressure, although that, too, appears to be changing. The current committee apparently also has no problem exalting American Pop Culture. Would CSAC have the internal fortitude to reject a poultry stamp today? I suppose that depends on how well-hatched the proposal was. ☐

TOPICAL POSTLINE

This is in regards to the fine article in the March-April issue of Topical Time ("Topics on Postmarks" column, page 18). It is nice to find someone else with a love of things piratical. Accompanying this letter is a scan of a cover with a fancy cancel from Pirates Cove, Fla., from July 17, 1931.

If I'm reading the table in Appendix 1 of U.S. International Postal Rates, 1872-1996, by Wawrukiewicz and Beecher, the domestic postage rate was 2¢ and the registry rate was 15¢. So the sender apparently overpaid by a penny.

Your letter reminds me of the old joke: There are only three letters in the Pirate alphabet, Aaarrrrhh, EEeeee and Aiiiii... Anyway...

This cover, from the golden era of 4th-Class post office fancy cancels of the early 20th Century, is a perfect example of one of the types of items that can enhance virtually any topical or thematic collection. Most of these, created by collectors and enterprising postmasters looking to enhance the revenue of tiny post offices, are quite scarce, but are still fairly affordable when found.

You are correct; the cover is overpaid by a penny. The cancel itself is classified as N-626 (20th Century United States Fancy Cancelations Revised, 1987). This example is currently the only recorded example and is the basis for the catalog listing.

How (and why) are stamp images chosen?

I could not wait for my Topical Time copy, so I quickly looked at the .pdf copy.

Hope you don't mind me saying, but I did not like the stamp that has been replaced for the Judaica Unit. At first glance you think it is for a Flowers Unit! — I know that this stamp does have some Judaica connections, but first impressions are seen by design, and the first thing you see is a flower.

The original stamp that was replaced was from Denmark, and depicted the Jewish religion perfectly; after all, it depicted the Sabbath Scene, which is carried out in Jewish homes on the Sabbath eve.

I would be grateful if you could pass on my comments to the person concerned for this.

— Gary Goodman

Gary, thank you for your email. The stamp you refer to is, of course, the Czechoslovakian Lidice memorial issue, an extremely fitting stamp for its Judaica connections. However, I do see how – at first glance – the stamp could appear to be more for a flower topical.

My goal in replacing the images was not to be a permanent replacement, but an intent to freshen the appearance of the magazine. Many of the images found on our website for the study units are fine for online use, but too poor in quality to reproduce in print without looking fuzzy (a constant source of frustration to me). But I also felt that changing the images representing the various study groups periodically will keep the listings looking fresher, as well as showing non-members some of the many wonderful stamps that can be found for each topic.

To that end, I intend to keep a file of potential images for each group and rotate them over time. Members of study units are welcome to send me high-quality images that can be used for this purpose. Images (at least 300 dpi) may be sent to wystamps@gmail.com for possible future use.

Just Along for the Ride

I was fortunate enough to have grown up in England, where the Battersea Fun Fair was just a short double-decker bus ride from our flat in Chelsea over the Thames. The Battersea Fun Fair was an old-time amusement park that was located in the London Borough of Wandsworth. What an amazing place this was for a youngster! Packed with all sorts of rides, foods and attractions, including a breath-robbing roller coaster called The Big Dipper, the park offered a young lad and his mates a way to spend an entire day, right up until that moment when allowance money that had been saved sadly ran out. There were water chutes, merry-go-rounds, fun houses and even a shooting gallery where one could flail away at all sorts of interactive targets, including the classic moving ducks that would delight each time they were struck and fell over (Figure 1). Having opened in 1951 as part of the “Festival of Britain” (Figure 2), the Fun Fair closed its doors for good in 1974, a year after we moved back home to the States, bringing about the end of an era and something quite honestly I’m glad I didn’t have to witness first hand.

It is with this little bit of nostalgia on my part, along with just a hint of an improvement in the weather here in the Northeast, that I thought for this issue of Topical Time we’d take a look at some of the offerings found in amusement parks, many of which will be reopening in a few weeks as the weather finally and mercifully warms up for good.

on one – sober or not – yet the roller coaster continues to hold the top spot as the crowd-pleaser for those thrill seekers willing to wait in long lines for a chance to have the bejeebers scared out of them. Both Russia and France lay claim to having come up with this popular ride in the late 1700s, but we’ll go to Germany for our first pictorial which can be seen in Figure 3. Showing a couple enjoying a ride in one of the cars on a not-so-steep section of the track, this postmark commemorates the 250th anniversary of the Arolsen flea and agricultural market. Bad Arolsen is a small town located in northern Hesse and this marking was used during a stamp show held there in 1981.

Figure 4 takes us to Duisburg, Germany, with a nice six-sided marking created in 2010 for “Local Hero Week” that depicts an entire roller coaster layout, including a large, scary-looking improvement in the weather here in the Northeast, that I thought for this issue of Topical Time we’d take a look at some of the offerings found in amusement parks, many of which will be reopening in a few weeks as the weather finally and mercifully warms up for good.

In my (much) younger days you couldn’t keep me off of them and these days you won’t ever find me vertical loop. Duisburg has the largest inland port in Europe and is well known for its mining industry, an industry that generates a lot of material in excavated stone and soil so it is by no accident that this roller coaster was built on top of a huge pile of this byproduct, named the Heinrich-Hildebrand Height in Angerpark. But there's a sneaky catch: What we have here is really a huge sculpture of a roller coaster and not an actual working one, although this still fits easily into this issue's theme. The sculpture is named the Great Tiger and Turtle - Magic Mountain and, more in line with my current speed, can be walked along its entire length while taking in the view of surrounding areas (Figure 5).

Our next stop is Hungary and in Figure 6 we find a stylized roller coaster track with a pictorial commemorating Vidam Park in Budapest, an amusement park that opened in May 1950 and ran continually until September 2013, when it was shut down. Reopening as an extension of the Budapest Zoo named Holnemvolt Park in April 2014, the roller coaster and a few other rides were kept open particularly because of their retro appeal.

Our last roller coaster pictorial hails from Switzerland and is a marking used in 1987 that celebrates the Basel Autumn Fair (Figure 7). This fair has run every year since 1471 when Kaiser Friederich III granted permission for the city to hold the event. Basel's streets get filled for a fortnight with all sorts of rides and booths selling foods and local products and draws visitors and revelers from all of Europe and beyond.

Next, let's look at a more mellow amusement attraction that had its beginnings as a less-than-mellow pastime, the merry-go-round (or carousel or round-about). Today's carousels evolved from a mounted cavalry training exercise used as early as the 12th century, both in Europe and the Middle East. Originally, knights would gallop in a circle while tossing small balls to one another – not an easy skill to master and one that undoubtedly required intense concentration and agility. In the 17th century the balls were replaced with rings hanging from ropes that the knights had to pluck off with their lances as they galloped in a circle (which explains where grabbing the ring originated).

By the 18th century, the first mechanical, hand-operated merry-go-rounds started to appear at European fairs and, over the years, these kept being improved upon by adding gearing mechanisms that would move the wooden horses up and down to simulate a galloping steed as well as graduating to, at first, steam power and then electric. Let's check out some postmarks:

This carousel is one of the few left that still uses true pipe organs for playing its music.

Speaking of concordance, the cover shown in Figure 9 is a fetching example with the full set of the British Fairs issue, a cachet and the pictorial postmark of the 1983 Goose Fair held at Nottingham, a traveling fun-fair in existence since 1285. Figure 10

Another fairly mellow ride, assuming one has no fear of heights, is the Ferris wheel. This easily recognizable attraction is named after George Washington Gale Ferris, Jr., an engineer who designed this amusement for debut at the 1893 World Columbian Exhibition held at Chicago, Ill. Standing 264 feet tall, the Ferris wheel was easily the largest non-building structure appearing at the Columbian Exhibition, but would be dwarfed by some its modern-day counterparts such as the London Eye (443 feet tall) or the current record holder, the High Roller in Las Vegas, Nevada (550 feet). ATA Mission Statement

The American Topical Association promotes topical stamp collecting and the educational and recreational aspects of this hobby by...

- ☛ Encouraging the collection, research, and study of topical stamps and their subjects.
- ☛ Providing for the exchange of ideas among members worldwide.
- ☛ Developing and publishing books, checklists, and audio-visual programs.
- ☛ Holding or participating in philatelic exhibitions.
- ☛ Assisting members to acquire and dispose of collections.

Having ridden this one during my youth, I can testify that 212 feet is way up there, and the views are incredible, especially after dark.

In Figures 17 and 18, neither of these pictorials from Japan mention which Ferris wheels are being illustrated (unless in Japanese characters which – if not found on a sushi menu – I can only wonder about), but they could be the Tempozan Ferris wheel in Osaka and the Daikanransha in Odaiba, respectively.

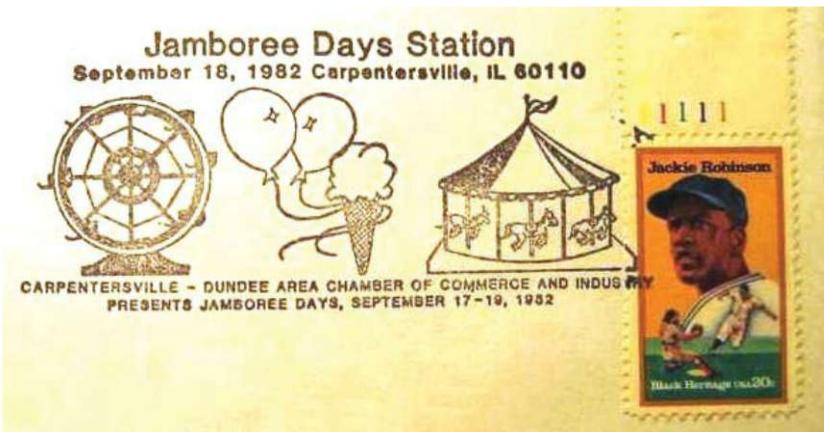

Figures 20 and 21 are 1991 and 1995 United Nations issues, both commemorating the Wiener Riesenrad.

Having already mentioned Vienna's Prater and its Riesenrad twice, we would be remiss in not examining an Austrian example showing the Big Wheel and we do so in Figure 22. Here we see another fine example of concordance between the stamp, a 1.50 Shilling issue commemorating the 200th Anniversary of Emperor Joseph II's opening of the Prater to the public (Scott 759), and its first-day pictorial from 1966.

Figure 24: After the Columbian Exhibition in Chicago had come to an end, the original Ferris wheel was moved to Saint Louis for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition and World's Fair held in 1904. Our marking, from 2004, celebrates the centennial anniversary of this Expo. The original Ferris wheel was demolished in 1906 after the end of this fair.

Finally, let's take a brief look at the ride known as the Skydiver, a grouping of seats attached by lines to a rotating central hub that speeds up while extending itself, sailing the participants ever upwards and outwards. First for this grouping, we'll return to the type of British Fairs cover we looked at a little while ago. This one is canceled with pictorials also used at Nottingham's 1983 Goose Fair.

These pictorials, however, show The Skydiver (Figure 25).

In Figure 26 we return to Ludwigsburg, Germany, for a 1998 pictorial showing

What's your passion? Consider sharing it as an article in Topical Time!

our ride, along with a Teddy Bear, one of the most sought-after prizes that can be won at a park's many booths where, for a price, one can measure one's strength or skill and possibly even win a stuffed critter for your Sweetie.

Keep the faith! Summer is on the way!

I'll leave you with this:

You are on a horse, galloping at a constant speed. On your right side is sharp drop off, and on your left side is an elephant traveling at the same speed as you. Directly in front of you is a galloping kangaroo and your horse is unable to overtake it. Behind you is a lion running at the same speed as you and the Kangaroo. What must you do to safely get out of this highly dangerous situation?

Get off the merry-go-round!

Advertising is main pictorial meter function

One of the questions I've received over the years about the many different pictorial meters that one can find is: Why do they exist? For a time meters weren't necessarily less expensive nor even more efficient than using postage stamps – at least for smaller companies – and creating pictorial dies was an additional expense.

Why, then, did companies go to a great deal of trouble to design and create memorable pictorial meters? The use of pictorial meters, during the 1930s and '40s in particular, not only made a company appear the epitome of "modern" (at a time when technology was being worshiped), but it also gave them an identity and a very real way to use the mail system as a form of display advertising.

The importance of the mail system as an advertising medium has never been overlooked, and there have been many schemes (mostly thwarted) to capitalize on this vital mode of communication. For decades, postal officials shut down various ideas, such as the advertising collar shown in Figure 1. These were advertisements printed either on a stamped envelope (around the stamp area) or on an envelope in the space where the franking was to be placed (effectively framing the stamp with an ad). Collars, like other advertising schemes, were soon abolished.

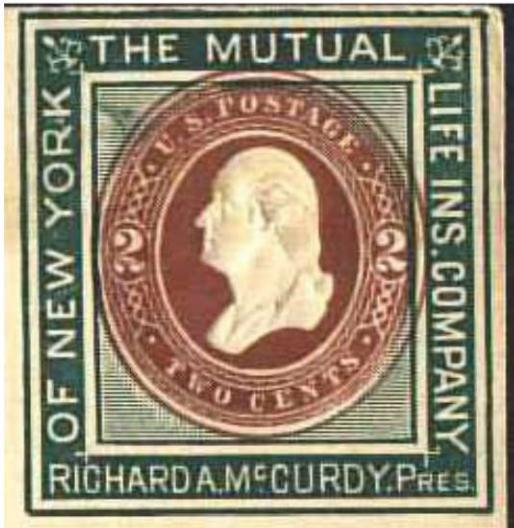

Figure 1. Although relatively short-lived, advertising collars succeeded in placing an advertisement in the live postage area.

Figure 2. Illustrated advertising covers – in a way – are a forerunner of pictorial meters. While they are not technically "postal," such as being part of the postage area, their function is essentially identical; to use the mail system for advertising.

One area that the United States Post Office Department really couldn't regulate much, however, is the large amount of real estate on both the front and back of an envelope – a space that was used to its fullest extent by some. We've all seen intricate and ornate advertising covers that utilize much of the front, back or both sides of an envelope.

As a slight digression, these illustrated advertising covers are not considered "postal" for most exhibiting purposes. Pictorial meters, of course, are part of the franking.

Collars, like other advertising schemes, were soon abolished.

Figure 4. Another popular manufacturer of typewriters, Royal, promoted its products in various ways on these meters from 1937-59.

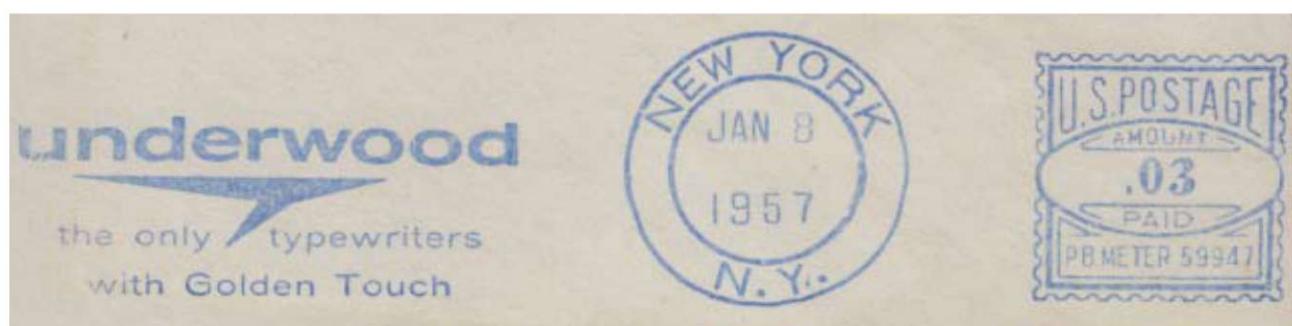

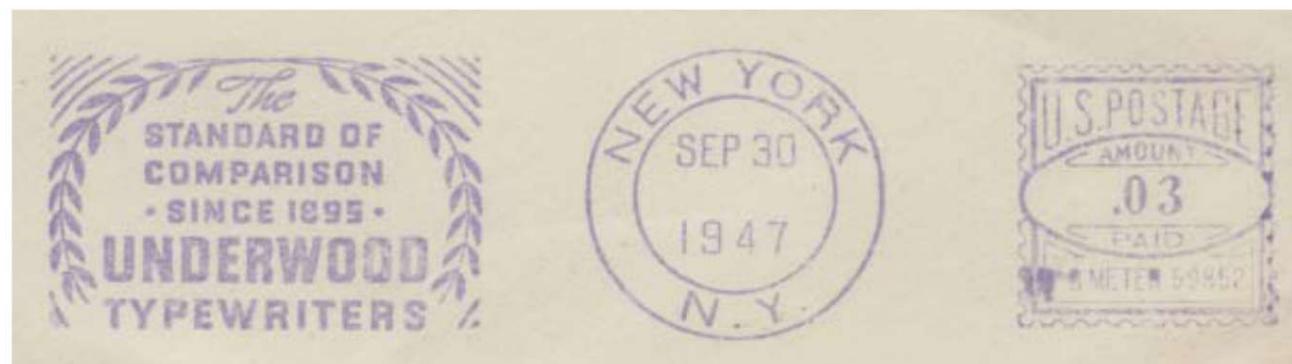

Figure 5. These examples of advertising meters from the Underwood company show different graphic approaches as well as the use of different colors.

Your gifts...

to the ATA are living testimony of the faith you have in your society

Stocks, bonds and other assets are welcomed and are tax deductible.

Help us go Boldly to the Future!

However, the intended purpose of both by the user is identical! It is an effort to maximize the use of a mail piece as an advertising vehicle.

As you may know, one of my own topical specialties is typewriters. Because they did not achieve widespread appeal in the business world until the turn of the 20th century, there are not that many illustrated advertising covers, but there are a number of meters.

Take a look at the 1891 advertising cover shown in Figure 2. The cover, from National Typewriter, features an illustration in the cornercard that mimics the then-current U.S. Special Delivery issue (inset). A slightly less ornate version of this design would have been perfect in a meter design (of course they didn't exist yet).

As one would expect, the vast majority of meters related to typewriters promote a specific brand. The one shown in Figure 3, from 1937, promotes the Remington "noiseless" typewriter! Remington, of course, was one of the pioneers of typewriter technology.

The meters pictured in Figure 4, spanning 1937-59, show different approaches, ranging from basic text on the earlier example to two pictorials, one of them quite detailed.

Figure 5 shows several examples from 1938-57, each promoting Underwood brand typewriters. Again, with several approaches to catch the reader's eye, including the use of several different colors.

Meter color is something we don't often talk about, but it can occasionally be significant or creative. The most common color, of course, is the standard pinkish-red-colored meter, which is still in use. The 1940s and '50s saw a rise in the use of various shades of blue and violet, as well as green (not shown).

But far and above one of the scarcest meter colors is brown, of which I've seen only a handful. An example of one of these meters (also promoting Underwood) is shown in Figure 6.

Figure 8. A rather stylized image of a typewriter appears on this 1962 pictorial meter from Egypt. The sender was a stationery company.

When looking for your topic, however, never underestimate or ignore text-only meters, such as the one shown in Figure 7. That meter, an undated 1½¢ bulk-rate meter, is obviously from the height of World War II, likely 1944. The message is clear. However, I did find it interesting the message is asking typewriter owners to sell, rather than donate, their machines to further the cause.

Admittedly, my meter collecting is United States-centric, as that is the greatest source of pictorial meters for me, but I'm always anxious to add foreign examples to my collection, whenever possible. The Figure 8 example recently turned up in an accumulation. Cropped from a full cover from the Standard Stationery Co., of Cairo, the meter pictures a rather stylized form of typewriter next to the postage area from Egypt. It is the only foreign typewriter meter I've seen to date, but I know there surely are others.

When searching for meters representing your topic(s), remember that many may be found in cheaper accumulations of meter cuts. The fact that they do not all match your topic is fine. You can always swap the others or maybe even sell them on the ATA TopicsOnLine website (www.topicalsonline.com). □

My Topic

Carlos Armendariz

Dawn Hamman

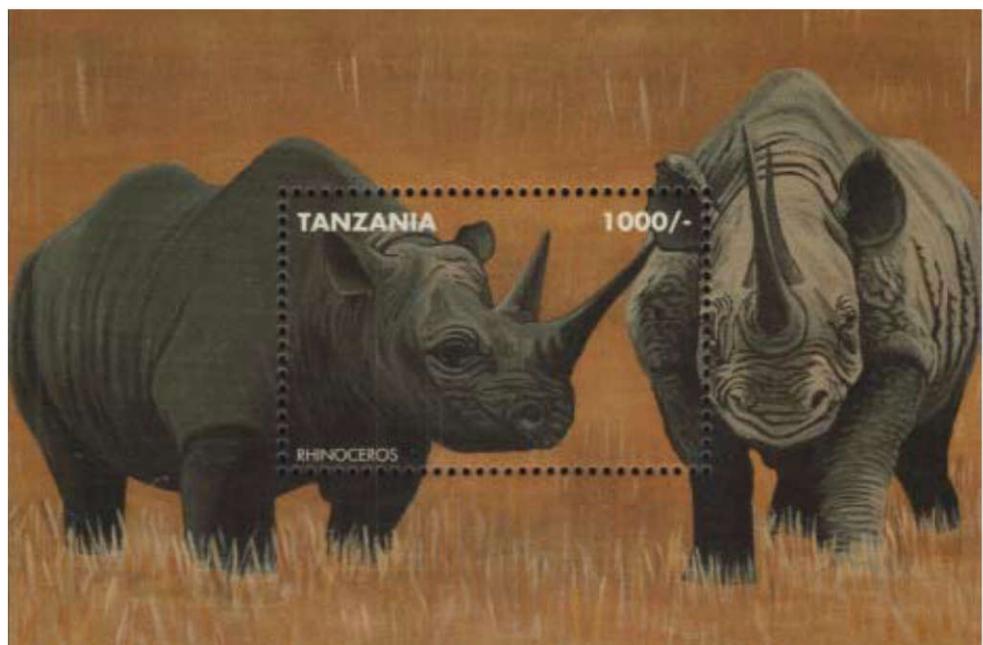

This is the ninth in a series of brief vignettes spotlighting interests of some of our fellow ATA members.

World traveler Carlos Armendariz of Mexico has pursued his stamp collecting hobby for 40 years and enjoys meeting and exchanging philatelic items with people all over the world. That is made easier by his facility with six languages.

"I have visited 54 countries, and many post offices," he laughs, "Stamp collecting has enlarged my world view tremendously." First trained as an entomologist, Carlos then became an accountant, but continues to study insects at home in Juarez, and also on his frequent travels.

His topic? Rhinoceroses on stamps. "I chose that topic because the rhino is a big and fascinating animal. Some live in groups, while others are solitary," he explained. "There is a great need to protect these animals. For example, there are less than 100 Javan rhinoceroses worldwide."

Carlos recently purchased a new ATA checklist. "There are 609 stamps of rhinos. I have my work cut out for me!" He would like to correspond with others who also collect rhinoceros stamps. ☐

Donald Wright Selected 2015 ATA Distinguished Topical Philatelist

George Griffenhagen

Entomologist Donald P. Wright, Jr., of Pennington, N.J., has been selected as the American Topical Association 2015 Distinguished Topical Philatelist, according to an announcement by DTP Committee chairman, Donald W. Smith. The award will be presented during the National Topical Stamp Show in Portland, Ore., July 31-Aug. 2, 2015.

Since 1956, Don has been a member of the oldest ATA Unit established in 1951 as the Biology Unit. During the 64 years of its existence, Don has served twice as president and three different terms as Unit Vice President. In 1971-1972, Don served as editor of the unit periodical, Biophilately, and continues to serve since 1971 as associate editor for the Entomology column (thus far more than 50 columns). In addition, Don has been the author of or contributor to four ATA Handbooks on Invertebrates, Entomology and Insects (released this year).

Don was born in Connecticut in 1928 and lived there until 1961, when he moved to New Jersey. He graduated in 1959 from the University of Connecticut, receiving a B.A. in Zoology-Entomology. Professionally, Don was employed for 39 years by American Cyanamid Company in Princeton, N.J., (now Pfizer Company). He retired in 1991 as Senior Research Entomologist and holds more than 100 U.S. and foreign patents. Don introduced the concept and coined the term “antifeedants” for insect control. He was invited to describe his research in Milan, Italy, at the World Congress of Pest Control.

In the U.S. Army during the Korean War, Don served with a Preventive Medicine Control Detachment, performing insect and rodent control research. As an amateur radio operator, Don has been Examination Director of the Delaware Valley Radio Association since 1972. He is also active in the Herb Society of America, serving as secretary-treasurer and maintaining the herb garden at the Holcombe Jimison Farmstead Museum.

NTSS is coming very soon; is a trip to Portland in your future?

NTSS 2015 is coming soon! If you haven't yet made your reservations, now is the time to do so. You'll find a full listing of scheduled events, dealers and exhibits in the next issue of Topical Time, as well as any last-minute information you'll need.

We'll be gathering July 31-Aug. 2 at the Monarch Hotel and Conference Center in the Portland, Ore., suburb of Clackamas, which is featuring a show room rate of $99, with amenities aplenty, including free parking, free airport transportation, complimentary Wi-Fi and more. Find out more at www.monarchhotel.cc, or call 503-652-1515. For the $99 room rate, reservations must be made by June 29.

As always, our bourse will have dealers who carry topical-related material, as well as stamps, covers and other general philatelic items and ephemera for all collectors. We expect to have collectors of all types at the show.

Check our society website, www.americantopicalassn.org/ntss/ntss2015.shtml, for all the latest, including information on both the pre- and post-show tours (sponsored by Orlie Trier and Jack Congrove, respectively), the President's Reception on Friday night, the Saturday awards banquet (sponsored by the ATA Biology Study Unit) and much more.

NTSS is always the highlight of the year for topical and thematic collectors from all over. Save the dates and join us. We're anxious to see you in Portland! ☺

May 25 is National Topical Stamp Collecting Day

A few years ago, the ATA Board voted to establish National Topical Stamp Collecting Day in honor of ATA's founder, Jerome (Jerry) Husak. May 25, Jerry's birthday, was chosen as the date. Jerry and his wife Sally live in Sun City West, Ariz., and are very pleased that Jerry is being honored in this way.

This year, May 25 is Memorial Day. Three stamps commemorating the Vietnam Medal of Honor will be released that day, so the National Topical Stamp Collecting Day cover will be a first-day cover. Orders will be filled – hopefully in June – after the covers are returned from the USPS first-day canceling service.

The cost of a 2015 NTSC Day cover with a Vietnam Medal of Honor stamp is $2.50 if a stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed with your check, or $3.50 by PayPal. Specific requests for the Army, Navy or Air Force Medal of Honor stamp will be honored at no additional cost. A set of three covers with all three medals of honor is $7 with stamped envelope, or $8 by PayPal.

If ordering both the original NTSC Day cover and the 2015 cover, enclose a check for $3.50 and a stamped, addressed envelope, or $4.50 by PayPal.

The date of May 25 is also National Missing Children Day. The USPS is releasing a stamp on May 18 to call attention to that worthy cause. Cachetmakers, take note: For 2016 National Topical Stamp Collecting Day, ATA will conduct a contest for NTSC Day using the National Missing Children Day theme. Details will be in the Jan-Feb 2016 Topical Time. ☐

Calendar Dates

The letters columns of many mainstream philatelic publications often publish angry missives from collectors who are indignant about the high cost and excessive number of mint stamps being issued by postal administrations worldwide. I always pity these space-filling stamp accumulators, who can't seem to understand that they are not obligated by law to collect one of everything. Nor do they understand that Scott and Gibbons catalogs are lists of stamps, not holy gospel. Topical collectors and postal historians have more fun because they are not confined by catalogs and collect what they like, according to their own plans.

Among my sideline collections, I have a calendar date collection, that of used stamps or covers with unusual dates on them or even just ordinary dates arranged on a blank calendar. Such stamps are cheap, often found in kiloware, and yet have enough challenge to make it interesting. Unlike mint stamps, you can't subscribe to a post office philatelic service or walk into any stamp dealer and pick up a completed set. The fun of philately, for me, is in the chase.

Calendar Dates By The Calendar

The simplest, yet still challenging, method is to collect used stamps with a clear dated postmark on them and arrange them by date. One can print album pages by computer or hand-draw them with a grid of blank cells, seven across and five down, one page for each month of the year. I mount these stamps by the date only, without regard to the year. Figure 1 shows the type of page I use. I keep the template on my computer and print off additional sheets as I need them. No expensive album supplements to buy from dealers! If you want a real lifetime challenge, you can collect dated stamps for each day of each year, say perhaps from your birth date or some particular time range.

I find it difficult enough just to focus on the day and month. When I first started collecting calendar dates, any stamp would do and still does for the first fill-in-the-blank. I get a fair amount of non-philatelic mail from Britain and my correspondents, not being stamp collectors, invariably use Machins. As I find duplicate dates, I am gradually converting my pages over to dated Machins, although many other stamps still sprinkle the album pages.

As an oddity, the post office in Port Dover, Ontario, Canada, produced a Friday the 13th cancel, shown in Figure 2.

Holidays

Another type of calendar collecting is by holiday. The major ones are fairly easy, such as Christmas (Figure 3), Lunar New Year, and Halloween. You can branch out to ethnic festivals, as you like. Most of us are descended from immigrants, so you can have a calendar date collection of the holidays of the Old Country. My mother was Finnish and in our house we celebrated St. Urho's Day on March 16, not that other ethnic group's party the next day (although I do have some St. Patrick's Day covers). Since St. Urho covers are not produced by anyone else – at least that I can find – I create my own by sending to post offices with names connected to Finland.

The cover shown in Figure 4 is one that I prepared with computer graphics and then colored with art pencils.

To find out what post offices have names related to an event, or issue a postmark commemorating that event, you can check the websites of postal administrations. They usually have checklists of post offices, although sometimes those are buried deep inside the site. As an example, www.canadapost.ca, has a front-page tab to find an individual post office when you already know the name. If you want to look over a checklist of current Canadian post offices to find something connected with your topic, you have to search for Householder Counts, not an obvious keyword. In creating St. Urho's Day covers, I had to do some drilling to find Canadian post offices with Finnish names (all of which, unfortunately, returned my covers with illegible postmarks, thus the reason none are shown here).

Posties at the sorting plants are not always as diligent as they should be in changing holiday slogans. It is not too difficult to find Christmas slogans still being used after the fact, such as the one shown in Figure 5, dated Dec. 28. January usages of Christmas slogans are common as well.

Palindromes And Consecutive Numbers

Palindromes are numbers that read the same forward or backward. They also frequently are referred to as "radar numbers." The most recent set were the year-month-day of the first 12 years of the 2000s, where postmarks read 01-01-01, 02-02-02 and so on (Figure 6). The previous century had many such dates. An example of Sept. 9, 1999, is shown in Figure 7.

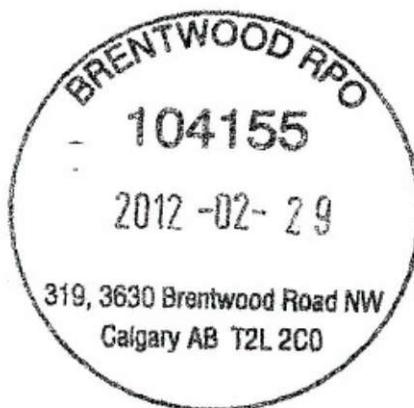

Depending on what style of postmark a post office uses, it has been possible to get cancels with hours as well as day, month and year, so that one could get a 1-2-3-4-5-6 type postmark, as seen in Figure 8. Many American post offices issue special postmarks when their Zip Code matches the calendar (Figure 9). These cancels can be found listed in the online Postal Bulletin at www.usps.com.

Calendar Changes

The most obvious type of calendar change is Leap Year, and every Feb. 29 I trot down to the local postal station to get such a cancel, as seen in Figure 10. The most recent leap year was in 2012. Back in 1952, one collector produced covers noting a rare calendar event, that of five Fridays in a Leap year February, shown in Figure 11. Daylight Savings Time is not a calendar event that one would think of commemorating, but I did receive such a cover from a collector in rural Alberta (Figure 12).

It's The End Of The World As We Know It

The Mayans (who are not extinct as many people believe) have a calendar that rolled over on Dec. 21, 2012. The doomsayers were laughed out of the room long before the actual date, and the Mayan people repeatedly made the point that their calendar was cyclical, not terminal. I had some fun creating dual date covers for the end of the world, shown in Figure 13. It gave the posties a laugh as well when I brought the covers in for hand canceling. This is all part of the fun of calendar collecting. ☺

Lincoln cinderellas. Unfortunately, he could only show them in black and white. Here I can show them in color.

Perhaps the ones most familiar to the non-cinderella collector are the subscription stamps issued in 1863-64, sold by his supporters to raise money for his re-election campaign. They are denominated 2¢, 3¢, 4¢, 5¢, 10¢ and 12¢, each a different color (Figure 1). Ah, for the good old days of donations in pennies!

Another beardless Lincoln was made by Hickey, Mallory & Co. in Cincinnati, Ohio, at about the same time. Springer lists purple and blue; I show orange (Figure 3).

A non-campaign cinderella was produced by J. H. Johnson, a job printer at 7 N. 10th St., Philadelphia, to pay for his private and free drop letter services. It was printed in both green and orange, in three types, depending on the typeface of "Johnson's."

and identified as "U.S. Pres't." (Figure 4) They are found on cover, almost never tied, usually with a 2¢ Black Jack. The proximity of the address to his shop speaks to the validity of its use (Figure 5).

There are other contemporary Union patriotic labels that are another whole field of study. I have written about them in The American Philatelist. ☐

Study Unit Spotlight

This month: Gems, Minerals & Jewelry study unit

[Editor's Note: This is the 28th installment of a regular feature intended to – indeed – spotlight one of our study units and the fine work done in its journal. This month we feature "Jackson County, Oregon's Mineral-Named Post Offices," Philagems International, February 2015, No. 124. To be considered for "Study Unit Spotlight," please select what you feel may be the finest article appearing in your journal during the past year or so (preferably with philatelic content) and submit it to the Topical Time editor (wystamps@gmail.com), or Study Unit Coordinator Jeff Hayward (stamps@jeffhayward.com). We hope you enjoy this fine feature. [Submissions of Spotlight features are earnestly solicited!]]

Jackson County, Oregon's Mineral-Named Post Offices

Nancy L. Swan

As members of the Southern Oregon Philatelic Society's "Post Office Study Team," our family began collecting Jackson County postal history in the 1970s. We made field trips to old post office locales. My interest in postal history coincided with that of collecting minerals on stamps and postmarks and membership in the Roxy Anne Gem and Mineral Society.

Minerals found in Jackson County are agate (moss, dendritic, banded blue-grey), chalcedony, chromite, cobalt, copper, crystal-lined geodes, gold, grossularite garnet, jasper, lead, manganese, mercury, nickel, petrified wood, platinum, rhodinite, silver, stibnite, tremolite asbestos, tungsten and zinc, plus marine fossils from the Siskiyou mountains, on the county's southern border.

Five of the county's post offices were named after minerals: Agate, Asbestos, Copper, Gold Hill and Soda Springs. The following is a selection from a much larger exhibit of Jackson County postal history.

Jackson County was the cradle of Oregon's mining industry. The landscape and mineral heritage relate to the area's volcanic past, especially the eruption of Mount Mazama (now Crater Lake National Park) in the Cascade chain. Mount McLaughlin, a Fuji-like dormant volcano, looms over the eastern horizon. Gold was first discovered in southern Oregon in 1851 on Jackson Creek (south of the present town of Jacksonville) and along the Applegate River tributaries. This caused a population boom! The Oregon territorial government established Jackson County on Jan. 12, 1852, and the designation of United States post offices began. Prospectors also began discovering gold on all creeks that fed into the Rogue River. In 1860, a farm hand found a piece of hounds-tooth quartz laced with gold at what is now Gold Hill. A total of $700,000 (today $40 million) in gold was taken out in nine months before the pocket played out. A similarly rich deposit was found near Steamboat. Hydraulic mining followed the placers, but ultimately was banned because of its destruction of the land. Drilling and sluicing continued for a while throughout the area. Hundreds of claims are still on file.

Doane Type 1 cancels are found on both the postcard (above) and on the cropped cover at right.

Until the 1930s, gold was the predominant mineral produced in Jackson County. During World War II, only mining related to minerals useful in the war effort was allowed. Today, more than 90% of the value of the county's metallic minerals still comes from gold.

Ultimately, it was the county's location on major river and stagecoach roads (later train tracks and the Pacific Interstate highway), its agriculture, timber cutting and growth as the regional commercial and medical center that kept the county growing. Today, miners still pan for gold in the area's streams, while rock hounds gather agates and petrified wood, and tourists enjoy Lithia Park's mineral waters.

Agate

Located in Central County, the Agate post office opened Feb. 13, 1901, and closed April 30, 1907. Jeffery S. Grimsby was the only postmaster. It was named for the agates of this "Agate Desert" area by farmers and agate hunters. Agate is centered at the Antelope and Modoc roads junction, a mile south of the Rogue.

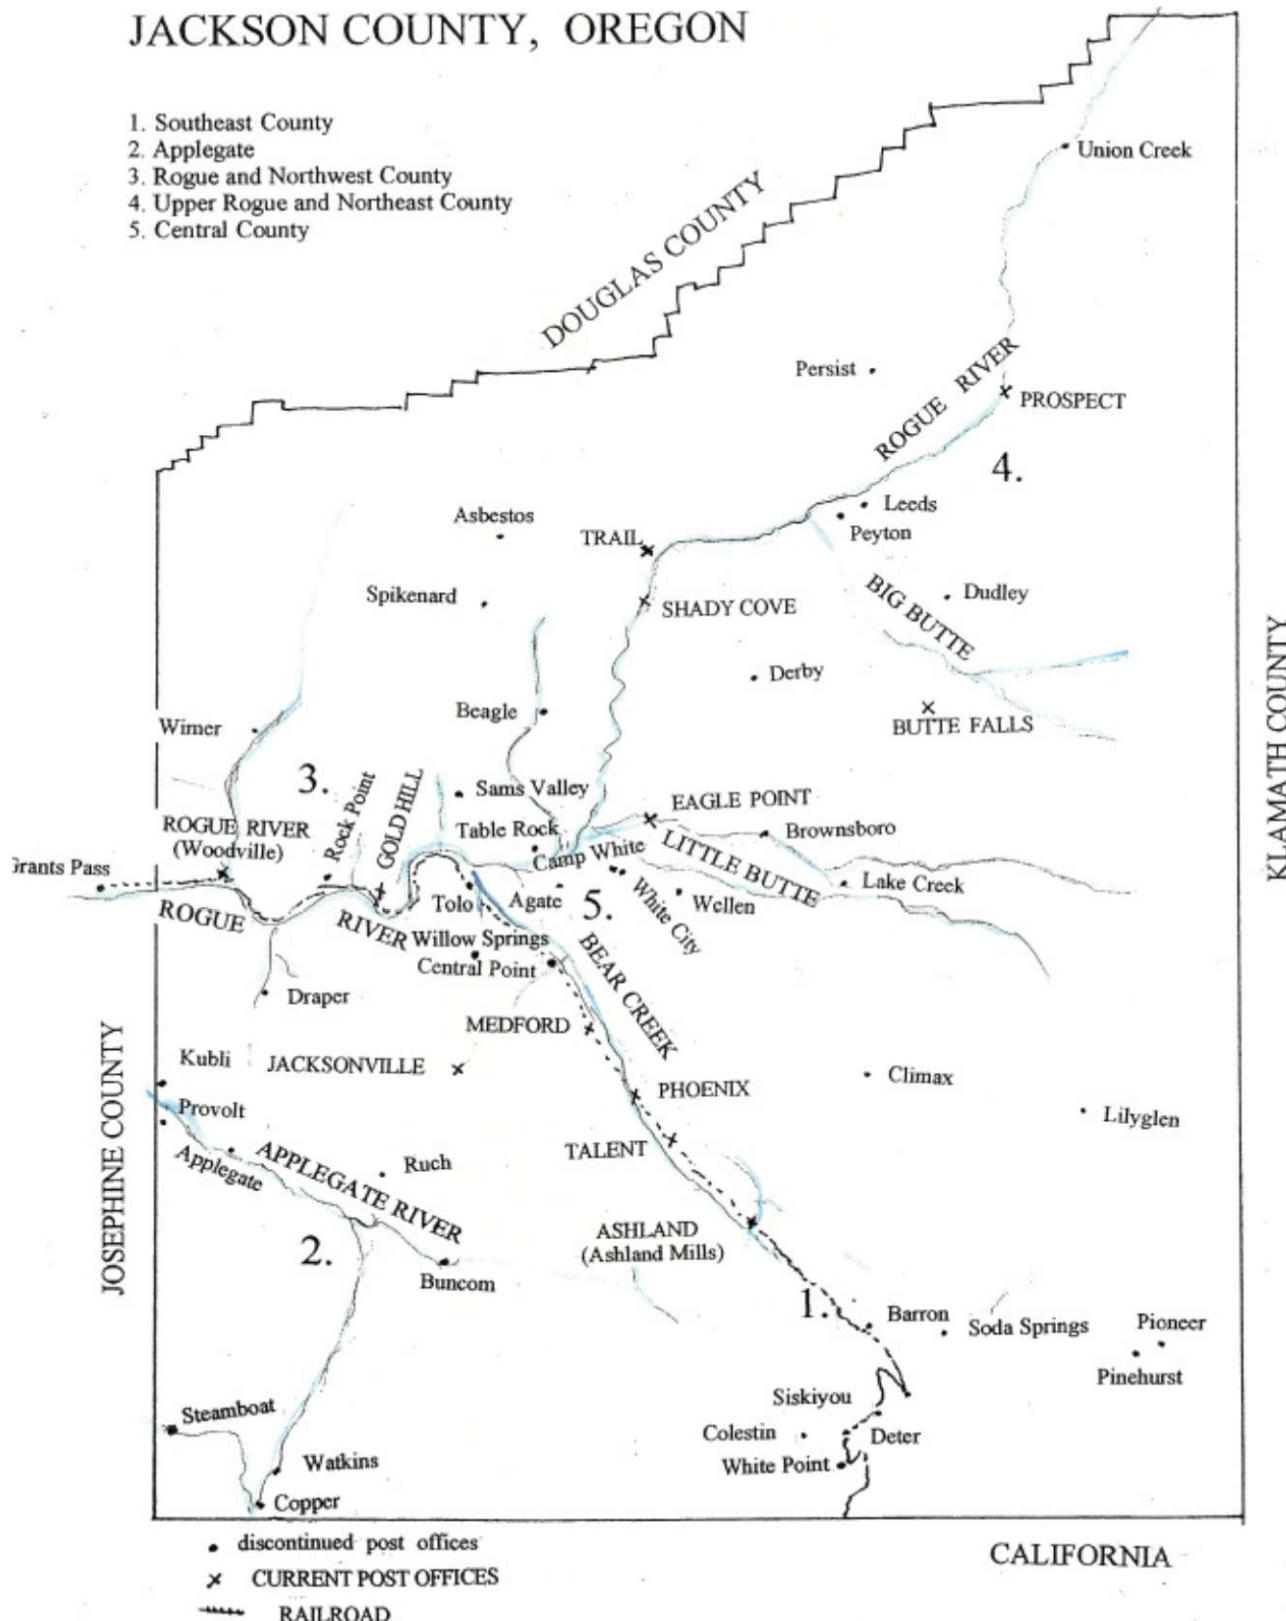

Asbestos

The Asbestos post office opened Aug. 15, 1893, and closed Aug. 31, 1918. It was named for the area's deposits of asbestos-bearing fibrous tremolite. This post office near Evans Creek was six miles north of Beagle. The first postmistress was May Sackett.

Copper

The Copper post office opened June 5, 1916, in Siskiyou County, Calif., and closed on May 31, 1932. This post office was opened especially to serve the workers of the Blue Ledge Copper Mine. In 1924, it was moved three miles north, one mile into Oregon. The new post office was in the cabin of postmistress Mamie Winnigham on the Applegate River, near the mouth of Carberry Creek. The post office closed after postmaster R.R. Rooney resigned. Copper now lies under the lake created by the Applegate Dam.

Gold Hill

The Gold Hill post office opened June 2, 1884, with Wm. S. Fitzgerald as postmaster. It was named for a hill on the Rogue's south bank, where gold was discovered. The town was at the rocky narrows of the Rogue, near the site of old toll bridges. Across the river was the important early settlement of Dardanelles. Most of the town was swept away by the flooding Rogue in 1890. It was rebuilt and incorporated in 1895.

Soda Springs

The Soda Springs post office opened Sept. 25, 1886, and was discontinued April 1, 1911. Although several places in Jackson County were known for soda springs, the only post office of that name was on Emigrant Creek, about 11 miles southwest of Ashland on Wagner's land at Wagner Springs. John Marshall held onto the postmaster's job until the post office closed. ☐

Gems, Minerals & Jewelry Study Unit

The Gems, Minerals & Jewelry Study Unit was formed in 1975 by 27 members and was officially chartered by the ATA in 1976. Karl Case was the first president and editor of its quarterly journal, Philagems, which has been published continuously since 1976. The study unit is dedicated to the study of rocks and minerals and their uses, as well as the cultural significance of different types of jewelry and gemstones. There are several checklists available for sale to members, including a checklist of mineral specimens with their chemical formulas. Dues in the United States are $15 and $20 elsewhere. JAPOS Bulletin

In "The Beginning of Historical Fiction," by Clete Delvaux, the author ponders the different influences and life experiences of James Fenimore Cooper and their effect on his writing. Living on the frontier influenced Cooper's Leatherstocking Tales, which is composed of six different novels. Cooper appears on only one U.S. stamp but Russia issued a set of five stamps commemorating the 200th anniversary of Cooper's birth in 1989. One stamp in this set is a portrait of James Fenimore Cooper and the other four show various scenes from the Leatherstocking Tales.

Jeff Dugdale provides a biography of American entertainer Erik Weisz, better known as Harry Houdini, in "Hou Done it!" in Judaica News, April 2015.

Weisz was brought to the United States by his parents, Rabbi Mayer Samuel Weisz and Cecilia Steiner, when he was four years old. He took the name "Harry Houdini" in tribute to the French illusionist Jean Eugene Robert-Houdin known for his illusions and mind-reading tricks. With many of his tricks being imitated by other magicians, Houdini established a signature trick called "The Chinese Water Torture Cell." This trick required that he escape from a sealed cell filled with water with his legs shackled to the cell top. Houdini would have to hold his breath for three minutes while performing his escape from the cell.

Himes recommends not using cornstarch to cover up the residual stamp adhesive on self-sticks after going through a collection received by an elderly collector. Checklist Notes

In our last column, a checklist contest was announced. The ATA member who first guessed the most requested checklist from the ATA checklist dATABse in 2015 would win a $10 credit toward purchase of checklists. The contest did not garner many entries and, unfortunately, no one who entered came up with the most popular list. The correct answer was Norman Rockwell. The Rockwell checklist currently has 207 entries, so its cost is $2.07. The first ATA member to enter the contest was Theresa Friburg. Although her entry was not correct, since no one else came up with a winning entry it seems only fair to award the prize to her. Theresa will receive $10 credit toward the purchase of checklists of her choice. Congratulations, Theresa!

Tom Stillman, ATA's new Checklist Coordinator, is hard at work learning his volunteer job of entering the new topical stamps listed in Linn's each month and making member-suggested corrections and additions to the checklist dATABse developed by Karen Cartier. If you have any kind of checklist suggestion to make, please email Tom at atachecklists@gmail.com, or mail him at PO Box 210748, San Francisco CA 94121-0748.

Checklist orders should be sent to the ATA Office by mail, PO Box 8, Carterville IL 62918-0008 USA; email, american topical@msn.com; or by phone (618) 985-5100. ☐

2015-17 Membership Directory Update

Thank you to the hundreds of ATA members who so promptly submitted their Membership Directory information/permission forms. More than 300 members submitted their forms electronically the first weekend after the website was provided by email. We are still working on acknowledging receipt of those forms. Another 100 members mailed in the form from the back of the Mar-Apr Topical Time — most noting they didn't receive their copy in time to meet the stated deadline. Never fear! All the "early birds" have made the work of our small office staff easier by supplying their permission early. Now's the time for the "night owls" who haven't submitted as yet to do so! Please return the form on the back of this issue by the middle of May, or else go to the ATA website and submit the form online. It's very short! But very important to ATA! Thanks to all for helping. ☐

Feathered Fish: The Loon

Leon Karanfil

Loons, or “divers,” as they are called in other parts of the world, are a group of migratory aquatic birds found across North America and northern Eurasia. They comprise the genus Gavia and are the only members of the family Gaviidae and the order Gaviiformes. Adult loons are easily recognized in summer by their striking mostly black-and-white patterned breeding plumage. At the end of summer, before fall migration, the adult birds moult into drab grey-brown colors and look no different than the immature; their bellies and wing linings, however, remain white year-round. These birds have a habit of swimming low in the water, a feature that distinguishes them from other waterfowl such as ducks and geese.

Loons are creatures of the northlands. Indeed, year after year in early spring, driven by an instinctual urge, they gather in flocks to leave their winter habitats in the south and set out for the Great North. They travel long distances, sometimes thousands of miles, to reach their ancestral lakes and ponds that dot the forested northern regions around and above the 50th parallel. Some species go as far north as the Arctic. The loon is a symbol of wilderness and solitude. The mysterious nature of this special bird, not to mention its otherworldly haunting calls and antics, has fascinated mankind for centuries. Today, being in the presence of loons in the wild, watching and hearing them go quietly about their simple yet purposeful lives, is an experience that brings us much joy and wonder, if not a respite from the everyday pressures of a complex world we call our own (paralleled, I hasten to add, with the Hobby). The main activities of the loon include hunting, feeding, resting, preening and parenting.

© 1952 National Wildlife Federation, Washington, D. C.

Figure 2. Canada Scott 1841, The Pacific Loon, breeds in Northern Canada. It resembles the Arctic loon but is usually smaller in size.

There are five living species of loons, each differing from the other in size, plumage and other physical features, as well as the geographic range in which they breed (although with some species, this overlaps). These are: the Red-throated Loon Gavia stellata (Figure 1); the Pacific Loon, Gavia pacifica (Figure 2); the Arctic Loon, Gavia arctica (Figure 3); the Yellow-billed Loon; Gavia adamsii; and the Common Loon, Gavia immer (Figure 4).

Although the Common loon, due to its breeding range, is the species with which we are most familiar, our knowledge of the birds applies more or less to the other four.

Figure 3. The Arctic Loon breeds in Eurasia and occasionally in western Alaska. It winters at sea, as well as on large lakes over a much wider range. It has a grey head and a black throat.

Figure 4 (left). Iceland Scott 388. The Common Loon, with its characteristic black-and white checked back, glossy black head and white necklace, is the species best known to us. It breeds in North America, Greenland, Iceland and Scotland. The Yellow-billed Loon closely resembles the Common Loon except that it is slightly larger and has a yellow-white bill (instead of black), the lower part of which angles up. The Yellow-billed Loon breeds in the Arctic and winters mainly at sea along the coasts of the northern Pacific Ocean and north-western Norway.

Having reached their northern destination, loons may sometimes wait for the ice to thaw completely before they can alight in pairs (they are monogamous birds) and reclaim their treasured northwoods lakes and ponds as their summer home, during which time territorial disputes among male adults may often occur (Figure 6). Once settled within these secluded sites, they can breed, nest and rear their young undisturbed. Before the fall freeze, loons head back south and spend the winter on ice-free coastal waters; some go as far south as Mexico. They never leave the northern hemisphere.

The Common Loon has been recognized as the official state bird of Minnesota since 1961 (Figure 5) and has been the official provincial bird of Ontario since 1994.

The seasonal migration pattern of the loon is determined by the fact that this bird spends most of its life staying afloat, thus seeking open waters that are fresh and adequate in food supply, as well as safe from predators.

Having reached their northern

The loon is relatively a large heavy-set bird, an average adult measuring almost a meter (3.3 ft) in length from bill to outstretched feet and weighing between 3.2 to 6.8 kg (7-15 pounds). The wingspan of a loon approaches 153 cm (60 inches). Their wings are rather small for a large body. Males are generally larger than females. The life expectancy of a loon may span from 15-30 years, although the mortality rate of the young is fairly high during their first and second years.

Fish make up the primary part of a loon's diet, with crayfish, snails and dragonfly nymphs as common side favorites. In winter they also feed on crabs.

In flight, loons assume a humpbacked profile with their head and neck held low and feet projecting beyond the tail (Figure 7). They can fly at average speeds of 120 km per hour (75mph) during migration and at altitudes above 450 meters (1,475 feet). Their wings beat at a rate of three to four beats per second. Commonly, however, loons are seen flying low, only 30 cm or 60 cm (foot or two), above water.

The loon is a fine example of streamlining. This long-bodied bird is so well adapted to aquatic life physically that it is often nicknamed "feathered fish." With its large fully webbed feet and strong articulated legs placed far back on the body, a loon makes an excellent swimmer and diver. It moves swiftly above and under water by propelling itself with its feet and uses its wings to turn. The loon can effortlessly dive to depths of 30 meters (100 feet) and can stay submerged for a maximum of three minutes. Most loon dives, however, are shallow, nine meters (30 feet) maximum, and last less than a minute. Unlike many other birds whose bones are mostly hollow by adaptation, many bones of the loon are solid and marrow-filled. The added weight gives the bird a body density almost equal to that of water, resulting in neutral buoyancy, a great aid in the bird's ability to dive or sink (Figure 8). Loons sink by compressing their feathers and forcing air out from their air sacs in their bodies. On the negative side, the loon's heavier weight works against the bird during take-offs: like an overloaded airplane, the bird may have to run long distances above they watch us as we watch them (caution or curiosity?).

The loon's long spearhead-shaped bill, 75mm (3 inches) in length, is surprisingly broad and sturdy and is placed on an equally wide stout head. The bird uses its bill to snap and grasp prey (Figure 9).

The unique plumage of the loon serves as camouflage, both for stealth and safety. Seen from underneath against a light-colored sky, the bird's white belly almost perfectly blends with the surface of the water, deceiving any prey fish and, at the same time, protecting it from predators from below, such as snapping turtles, large carnivorous fish and – on coastal waters – from seals during winter. Threats from above (from eagles in particular), are equally avoided by the dark white-specked backs, nicely mimicking the reflection of shimmering light off the surface of the lake.

The very fact that their feet are positioned so far back on the body makes loons also poorly adapted for walking on land. They waddle helplessly, moving one foot at a time, pushing and shuffling along with their breast to gain ground. No wonder they touch land only at birth, to nest or when sick. Interestingly, the name "loon" is believed to come from the Scandinavian word "lum" meaning "clumsy."

Since they cannot move on land very well, loons nest at the water's edge (Figure

Figure 11. Nesting loons, one loon is using its bill to position the egg under its incubation pouch. Item is conservation label designed by Quebec artist Pierre Leduc.

10), typically at the tip of an island or small peninsula, where they can swim to and fro secretly below the water's surface and, when in danger, dive directly from the nest into the deep. Their nests are rather bulky, built from bare earth or matted vegetation with a slight depression in the center to hold the eggs. Whenever possible, the birds tend to seek out their older nests and rebuild it as necessary. Within a few days after mating, the female goes ashore to lay her eggs in May or June, depending on latitude. A clutch usually consists of two eggs, which are somewhat elongated and dark brown spotted with black (Figure 11). The incubation lasts from 28-31 days and is a task shared by both sexes. Within 12-24 hours of hatching (once their down has dried), chicks leave their nest and take to the water, probably never to touch land again until adulthood. Although they are able to swim right away, chicks spend a couple of weeks riding on their parents' broad backs to keep warm and dry and avoid predators (Figure 12). Loons make extremely attentive parents, constantly keeping an eye on their offspring, caring and feeding them. During their first few weeks of life, chicks are fed exclusively by their parents, eating snails, small fish and aquatic vegetation. They require more protein as they grow and eat more fish. By the time they are 11-12 weeks old, chicks are able to catch food on their own and possibly fly as well.

By this time they have attained close to adult size and weigh three to 5.5 kg (6.6-12 pounds), nearly the weight of an adult loon. Loons reach adulthood and gain their breeding plumage only when they are 3-4 years old. Until then, they carry drab greyish feathers resembling adult birds in winter plumage (Figure 13).

Loons are famous for their eerie, haunting calls. Their cries, especially when heard resonating through the night, are sounds never to be forgotten. There are four distinct calls the birds make in a variety of combinations to communicate with one another: tremolo, wail, yodel and the hoot. The tremolo, a wavering call with high and low notes, sounds like a crazy "mirthless" laughter used whenever a loon is alarmed or excited. The tremolo may also mean annoyance or a greeting and is the only call that a loon may give in flight. The wail, one of the loveliest of loon calls, is reminiscent of a wolf howl and helps loons to regain contact with other loons, usually a mate or a chick. The yodel, mainly a cry of aggression, is given only by males to defend their territory against intruders (Figure 14). The yodel also serves as part of the mating and bonding ritual. Recordings have proven that each male has its unique "signature" yodel and thus can be identified by researchers. The hoot is a quiet single-note call and is used by family members in private, such as a parent greeting its chick or a ravenous chick begging for food.

Protected by federal laws, loons may not be hunted in the United States and Canada.

Although they are not globally listed as Endangered or Threatened Species, recent studies have shown a growing concern for the breeding success and general well-being of loons, particularly the Common Loon. Since this species nests in populated areas of Canada and the United States, it is more susceptible to the damaging effects of air and water pollution, as well as shoreline development and human disturbance. Increased lake acidity, caused by acid rain, along with elevated methyl mercury concentrations accumulated in the aquatic food chain, pose a major threat to loon population numbers. Also, lead poisoning from ingestion of loose lead sinkers used in fishing has resulted in a great number of adult loon deaths. As a consequence, loon breeding habitats have been rapidly disappearing in southern Canada and northern parts of the central United States.

Loons, as we know them today, have existed for more than 20 million years (five times longer than humans). While many other species unable to cope with the drastically changing world have disappeared from the face of the earth, loons not only have succeeded in adjusting and adapting to the new global landscapes and environmental conditions but, thanks to their evolutionary design, persisted remarkably unchanged. Today however, loons are facing their perhaps ultimate trial to survive, the challenge of humans. Will these extraordinary birds be able to overcome this monumental challenge yet once more and carry on, or do they face being cast forever into our dusty archives of natural history within a century or so? ☐

His topical collecting interests include Olympics, birds (in general), Columbus and Christmas. He had an article published in the Nov-Dec 1997 Topical Time about Summer Olympics in Rome 1960.

Chapter Chatter

By James Hogbin

ATA Chapter Coordinator Jim Hogbin died March 18 after a short hospitalization. The following column was written and submitted shortly before his death. Jim assumed the coordinator position in late 2014 and had written the "Chapter Chatter" column in Topical Time for the last two issues prior to this one. He had been an ATA member since 1959 and a life member since 1963. We are grateful for his membership and service. Our sympathies are extended to Jim's wife, Uldarica.

The Chapter Chatter column will resume after a new Chapter Coordinator has been named.

Here are the latest Chapter publications received by your Chapter Coordinator. Does your chapter have topicals in your Newsletter? Why not schedule a topical program for an upcoming meeting?

We welcome our newest chapter, the Baltimore Philatelic Society.

YOUTH IN TOPICS

MaryAnn Bowman

Youth Pages from Topical Website

As summer approaches and the heat and humidity set in, pursuing a hobby such as stamp collecting in an air-conditioned room can offer benefits to both adults and children. This would be a good time to introduce neighborhood children, grandchildren, or nieces and nephews, as well as your own children, to philately.

How are you using ATA youth website pages?

The ATA website has numerous activities introduced through the e-publication, Topical Tidbits. A wide variety of topics are available, free to download and print out. Likewise, there are more than 100 topical album pages ready for use.

With permission, Amy Ferguson sent the accompanying pictures of the stamp albums she made for her darling children as a Valentine gift. They then went to a local stamp show and took their albums. The lady in charge of the youth area at the show was so enamored of the album pages that she was going to print out the pages and make a similar book to take to all of her school, scout and youth presentations.

This is one example of how the youth material on the ATA website is being used. Have you seen or used any of the youth materials posted to the website? Please send your photos or stories to me at the address given at the end of this column.

As a follow-up to my January/February column on the Iditarod, the first 2015 issue of Topical Tidbits was created on that topic and is available now for download. The Topical Tidbits publications are going quarterly this year, so there will be four issues instead of six.

Vintage Stamp/Philatelic-Related Games

Those who are members of the American Philatelic Society may have recently seen the article in the April 2015 issue of The American Philatelist, written by our editor, Wayne Youngblood, in which he describes and illustrates elements of a German-produced child's game, The Tiny Town Post Office.

There are many postage stamp games available, but one that recently came to my attention is a British retro game from the 1950s titled "The Zoo Mail," which is actually two games in one. It was a game designed for any number of children to play and has recently been republished. There are eight pillar boxes (British mail boxes) and each box has illustrations of four different animals, with 32 different animals represented. There are also cards that depict 10 each of the 32 different animals, making a total of 320 animals to be posted.

The game can be played indoors or out, but it is recommended that the pillar boxes be placed in different locations, as far apart as possible, and in somewhat inaccessible places so that the "postmen" must hunt hard to find the pillar boxes.

Each player is assigned a number. That number is recorded on the back of one of the animal cards. All players start the game simultaneously and must “post” their card before returning to be given another card to post. Each piece posted must have the number of the postman on the back of the card. When all 320 cards have been posted, the pillar boxes are checked to see if the cards have been posted correctly or if there have been errors in posting. The winner is the person who has correctly posted the largest number of pieces. Three points are subtracted for incorrect placement of cards.

This party game is guaranteed to keep everyone active and racing around while generating laughter and fun. Do you have a favorite board or party game that is stamp or mail related? Have you created one of your own stamp games, perhaps a take-off of another party or board game? I’d love to hear about it and will share responses in a future column.

World Stamp Show New York 2016

As the next international stamp show to be held in the United States approaches, the ATA will need to think through and plan its participation. How do you envision the ATA promoting the hobby and topical collecting for youth at this major exhibition? Please share your ideas with me. ☐

George B. Griffenhagen

Holography and Philately

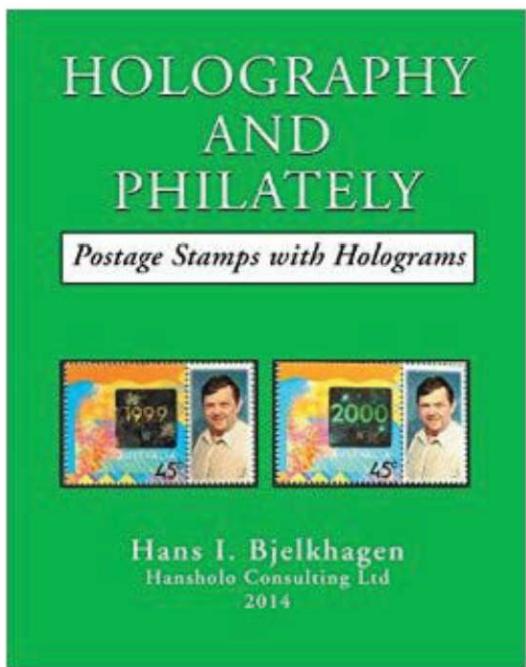

Holography and Philately (Postage Stamps with Holograms), by Hans I. Bjelkhagen, Professor Emeritus, International Imaging Sciences at Glyndwr University, United Kingdom, Xilibris Publishing United Kingdom, 8½ inches by 11 inches, softcover, 360 pages, 2014. Available: Amazon.com, Kindle Edition $6.99.

Holography is a technique that enables the creation of three-dimensional images (Holograms). It involves the use of a laser, interference, diffraction, light intensity recording and illuminations. The image changes as if the object was still present, thus making the object appear three-dimensional. Holography was invented in 1947 by Dennis Gabor (1900-79), who was awarded the 1971 Nobel Prize in Physics. Holography was convincingly demonstrated after the invention of the laser in 1960. University of Michigan professors Emmett Leith (1927-2005) and Juris Upatniks (b. 1936) developed a transmission hologram with 3D image in 1964. About the same time, Yuri Denusysk of the USSR developed the reflection hologram that was the first time the hologram could be viewed using incandescent light. The hologram found its first mass use for credit cards and banknotes, using the procedure developed by MIT Professor Stephen Benton.

Probably the first time that anyone saw philatelic holograms was in Stockholm, Sweden, in 1974. The featured attraction of the international stamp exhibition Stockholmia (Sept. 21-29, 1974) featured a hologram of the Swedish Coronation Crown of Eric XIV (from 1561). This hologram was the highlight of the show and people waited in long lines to see the Swedish Crown. During March 3 and 4, 1986, the European Robotic Spacecraft Giotto Mission encountered Hale's Comet and was photographically captured on a British Hologram. During Ameripex '86, the United States and France jointly issued a hologram on July 4, 1986, recognizing the 100th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty. That item became the cover of the show program. By this time, the philatelic world would know that stamp holograms were hot-stamped on paper, explaining why they have a reflecting coating. We were told that stamps covered with gold or silver foil are not holograms.

This 360-page book describes and illustrates in full color a variety of holograms. Included are holograms in the form of definitive stamps, souvenir sheets, miniature stamps, postal envelopes, postal cards, full sheets, blocks and booklets. A 10-page chart (pages 349-358) identifies 120 countries that have issued hologram stamps. The earliest were 1989, United States; 1990, Finland; 1991, Hungary and Poland; 1992, Canada; 1993, Mongolia and San Marino; 1994, Bhutan, Guinea, Guyana, Hong Kong, Isle of Man, New Zealand and Tonga; 1996, China PRC, Malaysi, and Thailand; 1997, Aland, St. Helena, Tristan de Cun, and Tuvalu; 1998, France, Germany, Grenada-Grenadines, Indonesia, Lithuania, Netherlands, Colombia, New Caledonia, St. Vincen, and Turkmenistan; 1999, Congo, Czech Republic, Ivory Coast, Kyrgyzstan, Macau, Namibia, Switzerland, and Ukraine. The most recent countries to report new philatelic holograms for 2013 include Curacao, Israel, Hungary, Japan Macau, Malaysia, Nigeria, Peru, Singapore and eight different new holograms issued by Czech Republic.

This chart I mentioned does not record the wide variety of different types of philatelic holograms, their colors or types of illustrations appearing on each hologram. The philatelic holograms depicted in full color in this book are grouped below into five classes according to the size of the various types of holograms.

Definitive Stamp Holograms	399
Souvenir Sheet Holograms	87
Postal Card & Envelope Holograms	161
Full or Partial Sheet Holograms	162
Enlarged Philatelic Holograms	26
Total holograms in the Handbook	836

The largest of the special informational tables and the most useful of all is the 14-page chart chronologically listing every official hologram mentioned in the book with details on country and date of issue, denomination, size (in mm) and perforation (many holograms are not perforated). The last column identifies the Scott catalog number, for all holograms regardless of the country of issue.

Frequently, variations exist between the stamp appearing in Scott and the equivalent Hologram image. Scott tells us that the circular green earth seen on Hologram 3413 appears only on Scott 3413, and Scott warns that soaking in water may affect hologram images.

The first holographic stamps issued in Canada appearing Jan. 11, 1992, were a se-tenant pair of Scott 1441-1442, but only the left-hand portion of the se-tenant pair appears as the hologram. On May 12, 2005, Thailand issued a souvenir sheet with holographic foil for the Bangkok Fashion City, depicting the colorful design of male and female models. Scott 2157 was duplicated as a hologram, matching the Scott illustration; however, Scott used portions of the souvenir sheet art as a strip of four stamps for Scott 2157a. The hologram was a single stamp on an airmail envelope.

Since virtually all stamp catalogs (whether Scott, Minkus, Yvert et Tellier or Michel) include a comprehensive subject index, you will probably expect one. According to the information contained in this book, holography – at least thus far – is based more on the art of design than on the themes and personalities featured. Compare the 1989 airmail panel, C122-C125 (Futuristic Mail Delivery) and 1989 art for the hologram in Fig. 3-2.6 (in the book) produced by Light Impressions shown side-by-side on page 21 of Holography and Philately. Instead of concluding with an index of the style found in the Scott stamp catalog, here is a selection of 58 holograms identified in such a way that readers can locate the information needed to use them thematically. ☐

Readers of Topical Time who know of other topical articles published in less well-known periodicals are urged to send photocopies or tear sheets of the article to George Griffenhagen, 12226 Cathedral Dr, Woodbridge VA 22192-2232, or via email: gbgriffenhagen@gmail.com, for mention in future “Publication Reviews” columns.

George Griffenhagen was longtime ATA board member and former editor of Topical Time. You may reach him at the previously given address.

Editorial Content

For editorial content of Topical Time, write to Wayne L. Youngblood, editor. Opinions expressed are those of the authors and not necessarily those of ATA, its officers or staff. Neither the ATA nor its officers assume responsibility for individual dealings with or between members.

Letters to the editor, features and short pieces are always welcomed, as long as they are strongly related to topical and thematic stamp collecting and add to the knowledge base of the hobby.

Unless otherwise noted, all catalog numbers are from the copyrighted Scott Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue, used with express permission of – and under license from – Amos Press of Sidney, Ohio.

Membership Information

For ATA membership information, change of address, ATA publication orders, back issues of Topical Time or ATA handbooks, contact the ATA Office. All copies of the 2011-13 ATA Membership Directory have been sold; the 2015-17 ATA Membership Directory should be published later this year and is available from the ATA Office.

The American Topical Association is recognized as a tax-exempt organization under Section 501(c)(3) of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code.
